St. Tadevos Church of Artashavan

Artashavan

The church was built in the XIII century. 1939 after demolishing the hall, the local communist authorities used the stones for the construction of the school. The last remains are very unstable and the possibility of collapse is high.

"Agarak" Historical and Cultural Reserve

Agarak

The large number of excavated pottery, burned clay-made statuettes, remains of round and horseshoe hearths, pedestals allow to attribute these times of habitation of Agarak to the Middle Ages of Shengavit or Qura-Arax archeological culture dating back to BC 29-27 centuries. The presence of an Urartian cave masoleum, an Urartian-stamped huge pots buried there and pottery on the southern side of the platform allows us to say that the Agarak archaeological site was inhabited in the BC 8-6th centuries as well. After the collapse of the Van Kingdom, Agarak was a large urban-type settlement.
